This article has a strategy guide. All information about mechanics, configurations and strategy can be found on the subpage. Hellhounds are medium to high level demons that are often given as a vampire hunter assignment to mid- to high-level players. The introduction of the Summon ability caused an increase in players killing them due to their gold charm drop rate. They have the third highest combat level of any monster outside Daemonheim in F2P, surpassed by the deadly red spider and knight revenant. Hellhounds are also known for their very high rate of hard track scroll fall. Hellhounds can also be purchased to protect a player's dungeon in the Construction ability (see here). With the removal of Bounty Hunter, the hounds were placed at Wilderness Volcano. They have been added to forinrithy's dungeon with the re-release of the Old Wilderness system. If hellhounds are assigned as a Vampire Slayer assignment, revenant hellhounds can be killed instead. They have very high accuracy and constantly strike even through high-level armor, such as the Barrows team. Hellhounds located in god Wars Dungeon are weak for water spells; elsewhere they are weak to cut weapons. Hellhounds can be a great way to train melee for F2P players, as players can exploit their weakness to cut with the Rune 2h sword and the 2h Gravit sword, possibly gaining more experience per hour than deadly red spiders. Please note: hellhounds are found only in the desert in the F2P worlds, so keep with the risk of PKers. The area is usually depopulated. Hellhounds are a good source of AFK melee training, along with good charms per hour. It is recommended (for AFK) to bring Guthan as it cures you occasionally. Locate Hellhounds in his lair under Taverley. If the player is killing hellish dogs for a Vampire Slayer assignment, then they can gain 20% more Slayer experience by equipping a demonic skull while killing kill in the Forinrithy dungeon, Wilderness Volcano or Deep Wilderness. They can gain another 20% more experience for death while killing hellhounds in these locations if they accept a special Erskine contract while being assigned hellhounds as a Vampire Slayer task. These experience bonuses accumulate, which means the player can gain an extra 40% Slayer experience. Completing a special Hunter contract rewards the player with a selection of coins or combat experience. Along with the bloody, they are the only demons that fall bones instead of ashes. They also don't count when assigned a dog hunter task. Hellhounds could be dogs or wolves that were corrupted by magic or something they ate (similar to the origin of the Hellcats), rather than real demons. This would explain why they drop bones. On June 16, 2009, hellhounds were placed on Wilderness Volcano, making it the first P2P monster to enter F2P. He also broke the strongest, non-reselling monster record, free to play monsters with a combat level of 92. After the update of the ring of wealth on March 16, 2011, the charm drop rates of hellhounds and rock lobsters had passed through the roads[1]. This caused hellhounds to release gold charms less often. Rather, they seemed to drop the blue charms much more often. However, this was set on March 28, as noted in the patch notes for that date.
